BOOKS, THESES AND ARTCLES ORGANIZED BY RAILROAD NAME

Books I included here are from R&LHS Railroad History book reviews, #192-205, WorldCat, 2003-2011 listings and RailPub Catalog (Paul Gibson, Bookseller) #173, 2011. The article listings are from Railroad History's Worth Reading column in each issue. Although the Railroad Book and Thesis Bibliography included theses, they now are few and have been combine with Dissertations in WorldCat, which I did not index. They usually are only very specialized topics having no historical reference value

WorldCat leaves MUCH to be desired in 2012, at least for my needs. There are no instructions on how to proceed in a proper order and no warning if you do not. Publications are identified by language and not county of the subject of publisher. U.S. books are about 20% of the English language books. Doing their Advance Search, if you click on Authors on the left columns you will get incorrect information Also a book may have as few as eight pages for what we would think of as being a pamphlet.

Note: Between 2004 and 2011 1865 books have been published and are included here. Some, however, possibly 100, should be considered pamphlets or booklets, 8 to 36 pages. So, in eight years 1785 books = 223 per year. The big increase since the late 1990s is picture books, and there is no end in sight of them for another ten to twenty years. Actually there are more because some picture books did not get into libraries that would have reported holding them. Morning Sun Books churns out 20 a year currently (2011) of pretty color books with all photos since WWII. Arcadia Press of Charleston, S.C. produces 15 or more a year formatted 6.5"x9" black and white with numerous pictures pre WWII and some going back to the 1800s. Whether the caption wordings are comparable to the old photos, which are often historic value, I do not know.

Whereas for the original listing of books up to and including most of those published in 2003 included Amazon, it no longer is organized for a search. I also found WorldCat has changed tremendously and is no longer dependable if you tell it to search for "Railroads." What broader topic could you use, but it die not include all academic library books that I discovered in Pennsylvania's university libraries. I also searched Transportation - Railroads and found books not included in Railroads and vice versa.

After 2000 there were practically no theses and those few concerned the government in Washington

Theses were found on the Internet data base WorldCat.

Articles were found in the Railway Locomotive and Historical Society's Bulletin and Railroad History section "Worth Reading" and other titles used by the journal..

Worth Reading in 1970 was enlarged with many more non railroad historical society publications included. It is therefore questionable as to how thorough it coverage was prior to 1970. After 1960 it is believed that an increasing number of nostalgia histories (many excellent) on railroads began appearing in state historical society publications.
